

Meet Amy Wick, our Ride For 65 Roses Ambassador

When Amy was born with cystic fibrosis 21 years ago, the doctors told her parents that she would only live about 7 years!

Cystic Fibrosis is a life-threatening genetic disease that affects the respiratory and digestive systems of its victims.

With the help of a great attitude, and research resulting in new therapies, funded by the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, Amy is currently attending Front Range Community College to prepare for entering Regis University's Nursing program. Amy's dad, Don, along with a dedicated group of friends, started the Ride For 65 Roses seven years ago to raise money to fund the continuing research needed to find a cure for cystic fibrosis.
