Because of risks to people with cystic fibrosis (CF), individuals with a confirmed positive sputum culture for Burkholderia cepacia complex shall not attend this event. This is because B. cepacia can be passed between individuals who have CF through close proximity. B. cepacia infection in a person with CF can cause serious respiratory illness and, in some patients, may lead to death. Despite this policy, there might still be some individuals with B. cepacia in attendance. B. cepacia is not a risk for otherwise healthy individuals. For alternative ways to participate and for information about this policy, please contact the CF Foundation at (800) FIGHT-CF or visit our Web site at www.cff.org. Consult your CF care center physician with medical questions."

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation was established in 1955 and exists to ensure that a cure for cystic fibrosis (CF) will be found.

Cystic fibrosis (CF) is a life-threatening genetic disease affecting approximately 30,000 children and adults in the United States. A defective gene causes the body to produce abnormally thick, sticky mucus. This abnormal mucus leads to chronic and life-threatening lung infections and impairs digestion. Currently, there is no cure.

CF Foundation-supported scientists, however, are writing a remarkable medical success story. They are quickly translating information from the laboratory -- such as knowledge about the inner workings of CF cells -- into promising new strategies for therapies. In fact, more clinical trials are underway on new CF drugs than ever before in our history.

In recognition for its work, the CF Foundation has been cited by such publications as SmartMoney and Forbes as one of the top health organizations in the country in terms of its efficiency and innovative approach to curing a genetic disease.

The path to curing CF is paved with numerous research opportunities -- any one of which could have a profound impact on the lives of those with the disease. The only thing that stands in the way to finding a cure is additional funds to support this life-saving research. With your help, we can give the children and adults with CF the quality of life and the future they deserve.
